British Soldiers Die

Jerusalem Blast
Fatal To 28

(By Associated Press)

JERUSALEM, March 1—The Stern newspaper today set the triple blast which wrecked three railroad sleepers yesterday, killing 28 British troops and injuring 32.

This is our answer for last Sunday's Ben Yehuda street crime," the Jewish underground group declared. It referred to the Jerusalem bombing which killed 54 Jews on Feb. 22.

Haganah, Jewish militia, said it had "unconfirmed reports" that British troops had arrested 24 Jews at Mikvi Israel, near Tel Aviv, last night and had "turned them over to an Arab mob as retaliation" for the train attack.

A police source in Jerusalem said a report that the 24 Jews were taken by soldiers from a spirits factory at Mikvi Israel and released in all-Arab Jaffa.

Fourth Bomb Is Dred

Lt. Gen. G. H. A. MacMillan, commander of British forces in Palestine, said three mines shattered the wooden troop cars near Rehovot, 15 miles southeast of Tel Aviv. They were jammed with soldiers returning from leave in Cairo.

MacMillan said a fourth mine failed to go off. Had it exploded, he said, the toll might have been 50 or more.

The three sleepers, part of a northbound Cairo express, were passing through a Jewish citrus belt 15 miles southeast of Tel Aviv when they were blown up. The blast ripped the tracks and hurled pieces of wreckage into the nearby orange trees. It was the fourth attack on the Cairo express.

To explosion climaxed a day of scattered violence in the Holy land. Jewish informants in Tel Aviv said six Jews were killed when a Haganah reconnaissance patrol was ambushed in the town of Salama near Tel Aviv. British police recovered the bodies.

Eight Jews, reported to be Sternists, robbed the Jerusalem municipality office of 800 pounds ($3,200).

STEEL PRICE
HEARING SETCongressional Inquiry Into
to Price Boost Opens
On Tuesday

WASHINGTON, March 1—Congress opens tomorrow its inquiry into the recent $5-a-ton steel price boost, which already is under Justice department scrutiny.

And in the meantime, the Federal Trade commission has called 13 steel company executives to a hearing here next Monday on its charges of a price-fixing conspiracy in the industry.

The congressional investigation is being handled by the senate-house economic committee, which wants to know what effect the increase in semi-finished steel prices will have on the cost of living.

Representatives of United States Steel, Bethlehem Steel and Allegheny Ludlum will be the first witnesses.

Evidence Studied
In addition, Senator O'Mahoney (D., of Wyoming), said yesterday he was ready to submit "conclusive evidence" that the $5-a-ton boost is only one of a dozen increases put into effect by the industry this year.

Sen. O'Mahoney, a member of the joint committee, quoted estimates that the increases "already ordered" will cost consumers about $17,000,000 a year.

FBI agents, acting on President Truman's orders questioned 10 steel companies last week about the advance in semi-finished steel prices. Their findings have not been disclosed.

The industry witnesses called by the FTC are Adam Haslett, vice president of Jones &amp; Laughlin Steel Corp., Pittsburgh, and the following company presidents:

Charles H. Cox, Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., Pittsburgh; Arthur R. Homer, Bethlehem Steel Co., Bethlehem, Pa.; Wilfred Sykes, Inland Steel Co., East Chicago, Ind.; Charles M. White, Republic Steel Corp., Cleveland; Carl I. Collins, Superior Steel Corp., Pittsburgh; Roy C. McKenna, Vanadium-Alloy Steel Corp., Latrobe, Pa.; Joseph T. Somers, Wyckoff Steel Co., Pittsburgh; W. H. Colvin Jr., Crucible Steel Corp., New York; Henry A. Roemer, Sharon Steel Corp., Sharon, Pa.; M. W. Saxman Jr., Latrobe Electric Steel Corp., Latrobe, Pa.; Edward L. Parker, Columbia Steel &amp; Shifting Co., Pittsburgh; and Joseph H. Carter, Pittsburgh Steel Co., Pittsburgh.

A pleket line was established at the plant after the strike was announced last night by Pete McCagnone, field representative of district No. 50, United Mine Workers.

McCagnone said the workers are seeking a blanket 20 cent hourly wage raise.

'Anything Can Happen'

The surgical towel, right, was removed from the abdominal cavity of Mrs. Lillian Arthur, 30, of San Mateo, Calif., following her complaint that "something must have been left inside me" after a Caesarean operation two years ago. Since the operation, in which twins Donald and Donna, pictured with Mrs. Arthur at left, were delivered, she had suffered pains and lost 100 pounds. The towel, wrapped neatly around Mrs. Arthur's intestines, was removed in an exploratory operation. Dr. Ray Schutt, of Bremerton, Wash., who attended Mrs. Arthur two years ago, said, "Anything can happen in an operation of this sort."

15 City Hospital Nurses
Capped At Program Sunday

Fifteen student nurses, members of the 1938 class of Salem City hospital training school, received their caps in an impressive candle-light ceremony at 4 p. m. Sunday in the Nurses home, E. State st.

Miss Hester Willis, directress of nurses, who arranged the event, officiated.

Three in the class are Salem girls—Alice Gailchick, Helen Chitea and Elaine Abe. The others are: Lola Jean Cady and Donna Jean Craig of Berlin Center; Esther Chamberlain of Lisbon; Marjorie Harris of Sebring; Miriam Wilson, Jerry Wer-

PATROL ARRESTS
10 OVER SUNDAY

Ten drivers were fined in district courts over the weekend, after being arrested on traffic violations, the state highway patrol reported.

Howard Batili, 23, of Hanoverton, was fined $10 and costs by Mayor Lloyd Culler of Washingtonville for speeding.

Constance Gibson, 33, of Youngstown, was fined $15 and costs by Mayor Hugh Jackson of Canfield on a similar charge.

Nathaniel Barnes, 25, of Youngstown, forfeited a $15 bond to Mayor Reed of Poland, after being arrested for speeding.

James Hafer, 23, of Reading, Pa., was fined $20 and costs by Dickson for reckless operation.

Theodore Shives Jr., 31, of Hubbard, was fined $5 and costs by Dickson on a similar charge.

William Powers, 36, of Youngstown, and Charles Hamm, 33, of MacDonald, were fined $20 and $15 and costs respectively by Justice Clara Gardner of Edinburg on truck overloading charges.

Howard Weaver, 31, of R. D. 3, Salem, was fined $5 and costs by Culler on a stop sign violation.

Samuel Faldus, 19, of Hanoverton, was fined $10 and costs by Mayor R. R. Johnson of Salem for having insufficient brakes.

Franklin Brown, 31, of Sebring, was fined $10 and costs by Mayor William Unger of Sebring for passing improperly.

Mt. Union Drive Aides
To Report On Thursday

County Chairman Charles McCorkhill of the Mount Union college campaign in Salem, Columbiana, East Palestine, Leokoma, Kenosha, Lisbon and surrounding territory, has asked all chairman, captains and workers in these districts to make every effort to see their prospects and come to the second report dinner at 7:30 p. m. Thursday in the Lake hotel.

The goal of the building fund drive is $10,000 and $10,000 has been marked at Salem's quota.

DURING WEEKEND

Two auto accidents and two auto-pedestrian accidents in Salem over the weekend resulted in injuries to three persons, one of which was serious, police reported.

Injured were:
Axel Nyberg, 59, of 930 S. Lincoln ave., throat injuries, lacerations of head and hands. An employee of the Bliss Co., he came here recently from Brooklyn, N. Y.

Thomas Blenkinsstaff of 729 Franklin st., severe lacerations of face, scalp, right wrist and both knees.

Paul Banick, 57, of W. State st., suffering from shock.

Nyberg was the driver of a car which struck a tractor-trailer and then a light and sign pole on W. State st. at 12:15 a. m. today. Blenkinsstaff was a passenger in his car.

Car Demolished

Police said the car, traveling west, hit the rear left wheel of the trailer, swerved and hit the pole 200 feet away. The car was completely demolished.

The injured pair was taken to the Central Clinic.

Banick was hurt when struck by a car driven by Robert R. Hickey, 16, of 180 Vine ave. at 12:35 a. m. Sunday at the corner of Ellsworth and State st.

Hickey made a turn from State onto N. Ellsworth when Banick walked into the side of his car, police said. He was knocked down, but refused medical aid.

Another pedestrian, Harry Pitt, was knocked down by a taxi driven by Harold Briggs, of 167 W. Seventh st. at Broadway and State at 12:10 p. m. Saturday. He, too, refused to be taken to a doctor, police said.

Cars driven by John Myers of 632 Perry st. and Joseph Phillips of Allequippa, Pa. collided at the traffic light at the intersection of Routes 14 and 62 at 1:05 p. m. Sunday. Both cars were damaged slightly.

President Reported Favorable

Soviet-Finns Pact
Discussions Open

HELSINKI, March 1—Discussions began within the Finnish government today on Prime Minister Stalin's proposal for a Finnish-Russian treaty of friendship and mutual assistance.

President Juho Paasikivi, it was learned, will be told Wednesday of the final decisions of major political parties on the idea, which is expected to be submitted to parliament. The government's official statement on the subject is not expected before Wednesday night.

Well informed sources said the president is in favor of signing such a treaty. Over the weekend he received K. L. Kulo, head of the pro-Moscow Socialist Unity party.

The executive committee of the Popular Democrats, a bloc of the Communists and the Socialist Union party, is to discuss the proposal later today. Premier Mauno Pekkala is to attend.

Press and radio here published yesterday the text of Stalin's letter to Paasikivi, dated Feb. 22 and closing, "with deep respect." The letter proposed negotiations in Moscow or Helsinki toward a "pact of friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance" against "possible German aggression."

VETS SIGN UP
FOR BONUSESApplications Distributed
For 12,000 GI's In Columbiana County

New Cars . . . new clothes . . . new furniture . . . payment of old bills . . . money in the tank . . . Those and 100 other reasons spurred Ohio's World War II veterans as the state's "bonus rush" opened today.

The dash for bonus application forms began early this morning and

Carl Carmichael, of 184 Jennings ave., was the first Salem veteran to return his Ohio bonus application to state headquarters this morning.

He obtained his application at the Army recruiting office in the postoffice at 9:30 a. m., soon after they were delivered.

Carmichael entered the Army July 10, 1942, and was discharged Dec. 18, 1945. He estimates he has $375 to $400 coming to him.

could be expected to continue as long as distributing points stayed open.

The blanks for Columbiana county arrived at the Lisbon courthouse this morning, and the job of distributing them to 28 agencies in the county, including Salem service organizations, began immediately.

Close to 12,000 veterans in this county are eligible.

First Come, First Served
Thousands of ex-GI's, gobs, Marines, Wacs, etc., flocked to the distribution centers to pick up the forms, fill them out, and mail them in. State Bonus Director Chester W. Goble repeatedly has promised payments will follow a first come, first served pattern.

But Goble refused to guess when early applicants can expect their checks.

"It's too early to say right now because of the number of factors involved—such as how many forms we get in the first few days," he explained. "Probably all we'll be able to do the first few days is start filing claims."

Some 600,000 Ohio veterans are eligible for payments between the minimum $30 and maximum $400. The bonus is tax exempt since it is a "gift" from the state, not payment for service.

The state shipped 3,010,241 application forms to distributing points. It also sent along 1,064,637 pre-addressed envelopes to insure correct return mailing. Each county's supply was based on its own estimate of the number of world war two veterans within its limits.

'GRANDMOTHER' IN OHIO PRISON DEAD

MARYSVILLE, March 1—"Grandmother" Gates died yesterday in the Ohio Women's reformatory.

The institution's oldest inmate was "such a sweet lovely soul" that fellow prisoners and attendants often found it difficult to realize she once led a gang that terrorized Darke county farmers.

Mrs. Laura Gates was 75 when a heart ailment claimed her life. She had been behind bars since Nov. 22, 1937.

Her son, Daniel Gates, a member of the gang, also died in prison. The third convicted member, Fred Glas, 60, a hired man on the Gates farm near Greenville, still is in the Ohio reformatory at Columbus.

Reformatory records show the gang stole sheep, cattle and other livestock from Darke county farmers for several years. If a farmer reported his loss to authorities, the barn would be burned to the ground a few nights later.

Mrs. Gates eventually was convicted of arson.

DIES IN COLLISION

CINCINNATI, March 1—Theodore Distel, 56, of Columbus, died yesterday in a three-car crash two miles south of here.

The house bill would cut taxes from 30 percent on the lowest income people to 10 percent on the highest, with no offsetting business levy.

Terminating the President's plan a "cost-of-living adjustment," Snyder told the senate finance committee "we cannot go beyond" that "at this time." He added:

"Premature weakening of our revenue system will involve serious consequence both for our domestic prosperity and for the peace of the world."

The Treasury chief did not appear in person. His prepared testimony was submitted to the committee at the start of its hearings on the bill which the house passed a month ago.

The senate group appears likely to recommend a $5,000,000 cut.

Chairman Milrkin (R-Colo.) already has said Mr. Truman's plan has no chance in congress.

Referring throughout his statement to the house bill by its number—H. R. 4790—Snyder's statement said:

"H. R. 4790 would exempt 6,300,000 from income taxation to comparison with the 10,300,000 exempted under the President's program."

"Moreover, 15,000,000 additional taxpayers with the lowest incomes would receive more tax reduction under the President's program than under H. R. 4790."

"These are the groups most urgently in need of relief from the high cost of living."

"Under the President's program, 93 percent of the income tax reduction would go to individuals with net income under $5,000. This compares with 66.3 percent under H. R. 4790."

If the Republican bill becomes law, Snyder said, this government not only will be unable to pay off some of the public debt next year but will have to borrow money and so increase the debt.

WASHINGTON, March 1—Secretary of the Treasury Snyder today stiffly opposed the house-passed bill to cut income taxes $6,500,000,000 this year.

In its place, Snyder said, congress should follow the $40 off-for-every-one plan of President Truman.

He said Mr. Truman's plan is fairer to everyone and would mean no money lost to the government because higher taxes on corporations would make up the difference.

Fans Jam Y. & S.
Cars On Last Run

Electric interurban passenger service was ended in Ohio Saturday night with a rollicking trolley party reminiscent of parties of the Gay Nineties which hailed electric rail service a half century ago.

Three hundred and thirty-four hilarious passengers jammed the Youngstown &amp; Southern Railway's five red electric cars, even filling the aisles, for the final run between Youngstown and Columbiana. And then the road gave up the ghost as a passenger line and became exclusively a freight carrier.

The party was a howling success. The time was when Ohio was crisscrossed with scores of electric interurban lines. They linked almost every community. They filled an important transportation need, and they prospered. They operated all kinds of services—high-speed limited cars, some sleepers, even some private cars as luxurious as the best operated by the steam roads. They began in the 1890's, and that was the day of the really gay trolley parties.

The Y. &amp; S. until Saturday night, was the punch-drunk last survivor of the era, save for some city lines in bigger Ohio cities. The others had failed, one by one. Because of declining patronage, the Y. &amp; S. got permission to quit from the public utilities commission.

The railroad's little Youngstown passenger station was virtually bursting at the seams with the "last ride" crowd near midnight Saturday.

The cars traveled to Columbiana and then made the return trip as the passengers sang lustily.

Why Was Parran Dismissed?

In acting on the confirmation of a successor, the senate will have a chance to look into the real reasons why President Truman failed to re-appoint Dr. Thomas A. Parran as surgeon general.

The President's brief statement that the office must be rotated as an incentive to public health service underlings doesn't stand up. The post of surgeon general isn't a political plum to be passed around like a county chairmanship. Furthermore, Dr. Parran's predecessors served 16 and 18 years respectively.

Dr. Parran has served 12 years and now, at 55, is capable of providing vigorous leadership in this important post for years to come. The President should be required to offer a better reason for his action in case of this international authority on public health.

Shelved Until Later

The senate's 57 to 30 decision to send the St. Lawrence seaway project back to the foreign affairs relations committee "for further study" will shelve this controversial proposal indefinitely. It's the latest in a long series of actions beginning in 1897 to do something about making the Great Lakes accessible to ocean-going vessels and, in more recent years, to develop the power potentialities of the St. Lawrence.

It is evident that the project now has the status of an old chestnut that will be regarded as edible only under circumstances not now in existence; namely, the need for a major public works project to furnish employment and pump-priming in a period of depression. It has been put on the shelf until later—not forever. Watch for it to be one of the first things revived if the United States ever needs a make-work project.

Crumbling Opposition

Proponents of restrictive margarine taxes are fighting a strong rear-guard action but the opposition isn't what it once was.

Evidence of the crumbling opposition was apparent last week when the Wisconsin Golden Guernsey Cooperative called on the legislature to repeal the 15-cent oleo tax, the 6-cent tax on oleo from other states and the 11 cent required by Wisconsin oleo consumers.

Progress is being made when Wisconsin dairymen admit such taxes are unjust. More and more of the arguments against oleo are being refuted. The principal ones left are: "Oleo will destroy the dairy industry," "Oleo colored yellow will be sold as butter," and "soybeans are a soil-depleting crop." The Wisconsin Cooperative's action indicates these arguments don't carry the weight they once did.

Regional School For Negroes

The nine southern states planning regional universities for negroes had best proceed slowly until they ascertain what the temper of the Supreme court is. Based on past decisions and past statements, the odds are that the plan will be held unconstitutional.

Speaking for the court 10 years ago, Chief Justice Hughes said, "the white resident is afforded legal education within the state; the negro resident having the same qualifications is refused it there and must go outside of the state to obtain it. This is a denial of equality of legal right to the enjoyment of the privilege which the state has set up, and the provision of the payment of tuition fees in another state does not remove the discrimination."

Based on these past statements and the temper of the court in recent times, there is good reason to believe the regional school plan will be called nothing more than a snide attempt to circumvent the 15th amendment.

Sales Talk

Lawrence B. Sizer, sales promotion manager of Marshall Field & Co., has addressed some thoughts on world affairs to fellow retailers through the trade magazine, Stores. His language is of a kind that merchandisers understand.

"What do you do," he asks, "when the unscrupulous fly-by-night competition down the street breaks a big push for his phony stuff. You don't waste any time telling him or the world that he's a phony. No, you remember your biggest guns in behalf of your own merchandise that you know is top-grade stuff—stuff you'll stand behind."

"Well, the world's like that today. A lot of phony junk is being foisted off on a lot of people—and the amazing thing is that we sit by and take it. In your business that isn't good enough. It isn't good enough in your nation's affairs either. You've got to prove your merchandise is a better buy . . . and that's precisely why you are in business today and the phony are out."

"We've got to stay in the democracy business, too. That's a pretty good sales talk for consumer—and merchant."

School The Year Around

Memorial schools would be really changed under recommendations of a commission of education has submitted to the American Association of School Administrators.

Schools would operate six days a week the year round with a month of time off and Saturdays devoted to recreation and extra-curricular activities. No school would have more than 500 pupils. Instead of annual or semi-annual promotions, each pupil would advance when in his teacher's opinion he was ready to do so. Every effort would be made to raise the standards of elementary teachers, whose pay would be increased to that of full-time day schools. This would make the job of elementary education, which is the key to the future, more important.

the elimination of the summer vacation, a holdover from the days when the nation was largely rural and children were needed to help with the crops. It is an arrangement established by custom and never changed because no one has undertaken to change it since the days when students in England devoted the three summer months to traveling on the continent.

It's a high goal the commission has set, and a laudable one, but it's far from realization in a country where 21 states still spend less than $99 a year per pupil on education.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, March 2

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

PREDOMINANCE of the feelings, impulses and emotions on this day, fauted into action by stimulating and conflicting planetary influences, may make for a sensational and dramatic state of affairs. Such external forces pre-dispose to strange and unpredictable behavior, with tendency to "fall into" showing off and other tactics for defensing good prospects. Well-regulated emotions, passions or intuitions might be shrewdly channeled into lucrative, happy and thrilling ventures.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves beset by a peculiar, combined and bewildered state of affairs in which a productive and promising condition might be diverted by wrong tactics in which the feelings, desires and emotions blot out a balanced use of the intellect and sound judgment. Distortions or exaggerations of facts might divert willing help in crisis, whereas subtle and controlled behavior, emotions and ideas could spell world victory.

A child born on this day may be endowed with remarkable, plastic and very liberal tendencies, impelling it to seek pleasure and gratification by rather do-

"I wonder what woke you up," Ann said, desperately casual. "It's usually so quiet out here in the country. Except for the crickets."

Rinda took off her gloves, opened her purse and got out cigarettes. She lit one, inhaled slowly deliberately.

She's stalling! Ann thought, frantically. She wants to tell me and she doesn't want to. She's all mixed up. I've got to steer her—

"Oh, probably nothing at all," Rinda said. "Maybe a night bird. If I hadn't got so wide awake I wouldn't have even thought about it. And then, of course, when I heard—" She stopped abruptly, her words hung in mid-air.

"When you heard . . . ?" Ann said gently.

"Ann, look, darling, I didn't hear anything. Really." She looked at Ann earnestly. "Not a thing that amounted to anything."

"Don't you think," Ann said, still in the same gentle voice, "that you might let me be the judge of that?" Rinda looked totally bewildered.

"Judge?" she said.

"Ann, take a deep breath. Look, Rinda, you may think I'm having mental aberrations, if you want to. You've known me for a long time and better, perhaps, than anyone except Rush. I—"

She stopped, quite suddenly. The words were there, on the tip of her tongue, all of them; they'd formed sentences of their own without her volition. Do you think I'm a fool? she cried; do you think I'm crazy enough to go to sleep with that fireplace on? Do you think I don't care whether I live or die?

Rinda leaned forward and patted Ann's knee. Her face was anxious. "Now don't get all excited," she said. "I'll tell you. In fact, if I didn't tell you it would worry me. Because I think you should know."

Her words came fast now, as though what she had to say was distasteful and she wanted to get them over. "I told you I couldn't sleep. I had a cigarette. It was late—after 1 o'clock—and I heard someone out in the hall. You'd said the maids didn't come home on Wednesday night and these sounds were—almost, furtive. At least they sounded that way to me."

"So I went to see who it was. Not that I'm brave—if he'd said 'boo' I'd've fainted." She stopped and tossed her cigarette over the railing. It fell onto the grass and lay there, smoldering, a thin spiral of smoke weaving skyward.

"If who had said 'boo'?" Rinda said reluctantly. "Tommy."

"Tommy?" Ann knew her face and voice were blank; she had to get better control of herself.

"It was Tommy and he was trying hard not to be heard. When I realized why—" She stopped again and Ann wanted to scream at her.

"If he weren't going to marry Laurie . . ." Rinda went on still reluctantly. "He had a bottle of whisky. Ann, he tried to hide it from me but I saw it."

The porch was quiet. The summer day droned on. And Rinda waited for Ann to say something.

So she said: "It's all right, Rinda. You haven't told me anything I don't know. Rush and I have worried about Tommy's drinking ever since he came here."

Rinda looked relieved. "We keep telling ourselves that it's a phase—readjustment—that his nerves are shot—"

"Social drinking is one thing," Rinda said slowly. "But there's something so sort of—well, menacing—about sneaking a bottle to your bedroom."

"There certainly is. And I feel so responsible for Laurie. As though I had to be her mother and father—her whole family, all rolled into one. I am her guardian." She sighed. "It becomes a heavier responsibility every day. And then there's the will."

Rinda waited for Ann to go on. "Laurie was 14 when Dad died. I was almost 24. Dad realized how different we were. It's odd that sisters, brought up in the same family, with the same surroundings and background, the same parents, can be so different. isn't it?"

"Odd maybe but certainly not unheard of. You do look alike."

Ann moved impatiently. "I don't mean looks. I mean mannerisms. Habits. I'm neat—Laurie's careless—Well, the way things are set up Laurie comes into some money when she's 21 but not the bulk of it until she's 30—unless she marries."

"Which she will. Well, what's so difficult about that?"

Mothers Club Members, Husbands Enjoy Party

Husbands of members of the Progressive Mothers club were "kings for the night" when they were guests at a charmingly-appointed dinner party Saturday evening at the Mahoning Country club, Girard.

And they wore gold crowns, too. These with monogrammed gold match holders marked their places at the table, set for 20 couples.

Carrying out a gold and red theme, a doll "king" graced the officers' table and arrangements of red and white carnations were used effectively on the other tables. Tall red lighted tapers in gilded heart holders added to the scene.

Leap Year Dance Held At Greenford

A floral crown was placed on the head of Francis O'Block when he was made Leap Year king at a Leap Year dance given by the Junior class of Greenford High school Friday evening in the gym, which was beautifully decorated in a color scheme of green, yellow and brown.

Bunkie Smith, who was chosen queen, received a bouquet of flowers.

Square and round dancing were featured and games and contests were included on the program of entertainment.

Prizes were won by Loretta Feicht, Marcella Schaffer and Kenny White.

Juniors gave the party in appreciation of the assistance given their class in other school activities. Refreshments were served.

Guild Will Meet

WE, THE WOMEN

BY RUTH MILLETT
Don't say such things as these overdone gems:
"Of course, it's none of my business—but," Any personal opinion that has to be introduced by that statement is better left unsaid.
"Johnny did the cutest thing today!" If you must tell the story about Johnny, don't label it cute. Let your listeners decide that for themselves. And, before you tell it at all, make sure Johnny is out of earshot.
"There may not be a word of truth in it—but," That's right, there may not. So don't pass it along, even with that apology.
"It's very nice, though nothing I would ever choose myself." Pan it if you must, but not in that sweet-sweet fashion.
"She has absolutely no personality." Everybody has a personality. If you're trying to describe her personality, go ahead and describe it. Don't just say she hasn't any.
"I really should be going—." If you should, get up and go. If not, relax, and let everyone else relax.
"How do you like our town?" Any remark addressed to a new-comer or visitor will get a more stimulating, and probably more honest, response than that one.
"I can top that one." Maybe you can, but you shouldn't.
"I'm telling you this for your own good." Remember that nobody wants to be told anything for his own good.

The year 1948 had six eclipses, four of the sun and two of the moon. No year can have more than a total of seven eclipses.

Meeting Theme Is Brotherhood

As a climax to National Brotherhood week, the A. M. E. Zion church missionary society members entertained women of the Presbyterian and Baptist churches Sunday afternoon in their church.

Mrs. W. P. Dockery, wife of the pastor, welcomed the guests and introduced Mrs. Frank Brudery, Baptist, and Miss Erma Hoopes, Presbyterian, who gave greetings from their churches.

The theme stressed was, "Christianity, practiced as Christ would have us practice it, overcomes racial barriers."

Mrs. Sara Ogletree, of Sewickley, president of Allegheny A. M. E. Zion district, told of the work done by their organizations for missions.

Mrs. Emma Tibbs played "The Lost Chord" on the organ, and Mrs. Robert McGhee sang "Saved by Grace." Mrs. Robert Jones presented an unusual reading, "Creation," while the program was concluded with remarks by Rev. Dockery.

Refreshments were served to some 85 women.

Questions, Answers

Q—Where did the banjo come from?

A—The instrument was introduced into the U. S. by Negro slaves. Its name is a corruption of the Italian bandore and Portuguese bandura, derived from the Greek pandoura, a three-stringed instrument.

Q—How did the grapefruit receive its name?

A—From the fact that the fruit is borne in clusters similar to a bunch of grapes.

Q—When did France lose Canada?

A—France lost Canada in 1759 at the final battle of the Heights of Abraham.

Eagles 3 Team Cops Salem Bowling Tournament With 3,031

Lead Field Of 96 Entries; Recreation Keglers Second

The Eagles 3 bowling team, a medium handicap squad rolling in the 1 p. m. squad Sunday, scorched the Salem Bowling Center alleys with a 3031 series to cop the five-man event in the annual Salem Bowling association tournament.

With a 96-pin per game handicap, the Eagles rolled games of 877, 861 and 989, actual pins, for a total of 2727. Merle "Red" White paced the team with a sharp 619 series. His 246, along with Steve Fronius' 224 in the final game sparked their stretch drive.

Others on the team included Arthur "Shorty" Borton, A. Morgart and Jim Kirby. Second and third places went to the Recreation Billiards and the Firestone Hotspots, who rolled in the 7 p. m. shift yesterday. Oddly enough the two teams bowled together and were nip and tuck all the way. The Rec keggers turned on the heat in the last game to go ahead and clinch second honors.

The Recreation totaled 2903, including a 163 pin handicap, while the Firestones collected 2867 pins, with a 240 pin assist.

Twenty teams will collect prize money, ranging from $50 to $2. The winners, the Eagles, will also receive individual medals.

The bowling end of the tournament, which was run off in two days, was well handled by Art Kane, proprietor of the Bowling Center. The doubles and singles competition will be held next Saturday and Sunday.

Ninety-six teams competed over the weekend, the greatest entry in the tournament's history. The prize winning teams follow:

Sees St. Louis Cards 'Team to Whip In 48'

BOSTON—Manager Billy Southworth warned his Boston Braves bosses today the St. Louis Cardinals "look like the club to beat" as he prepared to shove off from his Sunbury, Ohio, home for the tribal training camp at Bradenton, Fla.

"The Cards have pitching and everything else needed to win the National league championship," their former pennant winning manager advised Braves General Manager John Quinn by telephone.

"Brooklyn is good enough to win again and the Giants will be in the thick of it if they can get additional pitching strength," Southworth continued.

Southworth also rates the Cincinnati Reds as dangerous because of their pitching strength.

Discussing his own Braves, Southworth told Quinn their pitching and catching prospects are much brighter than during the past two seasons.

Leetonia Edged By Carrollton Five 62-60

Carrollton ended its 1947-48 season with a double-overtime victory over Leetonia Saturday night at Leetonia. Dick Wilson, playing his last high school game, sank a set shot in the sudden death period for the triumph.

The teams were deadlocked 15-15 at the end of the initial stanza but Leetonia broke away to gain a 32-29 lead. Carrollton came back to capture a 46-45 margin at the three-quarter mark and the contest ended 56-56. The first overtime saw each team score four points for a 60-all knot going into the sudden-death period.

MIAMI, Fla.—Citation ($2.40) won $50,000 added Flamingo stakes at Hialeah, by six lengths in 1:48 4/5 for mile and an eighth. Big Dial was second, Saggy third. Crowd: 24,192; handle: $1,327,280.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Lawson Little shot a 72-hole 16 under par 272 to win the $2,000 top prize in the St. Petersburg Open tournament. Bobby Locke of South Africa finished second with 275.

ORLANDO, Fla.—Peg Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, and Carl Dann, Jr., of Orlando, defeated Mrs. Billie Harting of Miami and Ray Allen of DeLand, Fla., in the Florida mixed two-ball open golf tournament, 4 and 3.

MIAMI, Fla.—Louise Suggs, Atlanta, Ga., and Sammy Byrd, Detroit, defeated Mrs. Mildred (Babe) Didrikson Zaharias, Denver, Colo., and Al Bessellink, University of Miami, 2 and 1 in an exhibition golf match at the Biltmore club.

INDIANS AT TOP STRENGTH

Cleveland Teammates Begin Spring Training Workouts

(By The Associated Press)
TUCSON, Ariz., March 1.—The Cleveland Indians opened their seven-week spring training season here today at full strength and with most of the men near their best playing weights.

Manager Lou Boudreau had basic calisthenics, with lots of running, on the first day's program and thought he might start the pitchers loosening up tomorrow or Wednesday.

A drenching rain—a rarity in this high, dry area—greeted the Tribe yesterday afternoon and made the weather a main topic of conversation. The Indians have only five days to prepare for their opening exhibition game here Saturday with the New York Giants.

Seeray Conditioned
Perhaps the most "conditioned"—and certainly the center of his teammates' attention—was outfielder Pat Seeray, who has been working on a generous waist line since last November. Seeray, never less than 215 during his five years with the Indians, is down to 195.

Tribe President Bill Veck, at whose advice and expense Seeray began his reducing in California last fall, greeted the infrequent slugger:

"Pat, I can't believe it. You look a little hungry. Have any trouble walking around?"

Seeray grinned, displayed seven new notches in his belt, and countered:

"I've not had a waistline like this since I was 14."

Late arrivals yesterday were Bob Feller, making his ninth spring training trip, and Hank Greenberg, who came in from nearby Phoenix with his wife.

Greenberg hasn't signed a contract yet, Veck said, but will test his ailing right arm during Tribe workouts.

Edgar (Special Delivery) Jones, the Cleveland Brown's stocky left halfback, arrived from Florida for a trial as a hurler. Jones does not plan to sign a contract unless he is to remain with the club. At 29 he figures he is too old to trek through the minors.

Hunting and Fishing Notes

National Wildlife week, set by the Wildlife Management Institute, will be observed from March 21 to 27. State Conservation Commissioner H. A. Rider said the observance is an appropriate forerunner to the observance of Conservation Week in Ohio schools, proclaimed by Governor Thomas J. Herbert as the week of April 19 to 23.

During this week schools throughout the state will place particular emphasis on conservation and restoration in its various phases of soil, water, forests, minerals and wildlife with a special observance on Arbor day, Friday, April 23.

New Fishing License Sale
Almost a half million fishing licenses for the 1948 season have been forwarded to agents throughout the state and are now on sale to provide Ohio anglers with the legal means of fishing, beginning March 1.

Weekend In Sports

ARCADIA, Calif.—Talon ($6.90) won $100,000 Santa Anita handicap. On Trust was second, Double Jay third. Mile and a quarter time was 2:03 2/5. Crowd: 62,000; handle: $3,842,032.

MIAMI, Fla.—Citation ($2.40) won $50,000 added Flamingo stakes at Hialeah, by six lengths in 1:48 4/5 for mile and an eighth. Big Dial was second, Saggy third. Crowd: 24,192; handle: $1,327,280.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Lawson Little shot a 72-hole 16 under par 272 to win the $2,000 top prize in the St. Petersburg Open tournament. Bobby Locke of South Africa finished second with 275.

ORLANDO, Fla.—Peg Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, and Carl Dann, Jr., of Orlando, defeated Mrs. Billie Harting of Miami and Ray Allen of DeLand, Fla., in the Florida mixed two-ball open golf tournament, 4 and 3.

MIAMI, Fla.—Louise Suggs, Atlanta, Ga., and Sammy Byrd, Detroit, defeated Mrs. Mildred (Babe) Didrikson Zaharias, Denver, Colo., and Al Bessellink, University of Miami, 2 and 1 in an exhibition golf match at the Biltmore club.

Trying One On For Size

President Bill Veck of the Cleveland Indians beams happily as he helps Hank Greenberg into a Cleveland uniform, after a conference in Phoenix, Ariz., with the former Detroit Tigers and Pittsburgh Pirates slugger. Although Greenberg did not sign a contract, Veck said the baseball star will be with the Indians "in some capacity" this season—either as a coach-player or just a coach.

DEPT. OF GRATITUDE
Hundreds of Salem basketball fans were provided, at a nominal cost, with an excellent basketball season during the past few months. The people primarily responsible for all of that enjoyment are, unquestionably, the members of that basketball team.

It's the candid opinion of this department that it would be a splendid gesture on the part of Salem's fans, if they would shell out a few bucks apiece to send that same basketball team off on a trip for a little of the same spectator enjoyment it provided here.

We're speaking of the state Class A and B basketball finals in Columbus on April 1, 2 and 3. The team saw it last year, got a big bang out of it, and should get the opportunity again this season.

Arrangements can be easily completed through officials at Ohio State to accommodate the team in a fraternity house. The only costs involved would be tickets and meals and possibly some travel expenses. The whole project could probably be handled easily with $150—and maybe not that much.

To give the kids a gift the Boosters club is financially unable to provide this spring. It seems like a good idea to ask some interested people to contribute.

If you're interested—and we're sure a lot of you will be—give this department a buzz and we'll handle your contributions. The fund already has been started by a couple of ardent fans, but more is needed.

Would you be willing to show the kids how you appreciated their efforts this season?

DEPT. OF GOOD WISHES
It was most encouraging and certainly welcome news to most Salemites and others throughout the district to see the showing Jack Mills' Lisbon Blue Devils made in the Class A tournament Friday evening.

Mills' team has been making great strides in improvement all season long and there is plenty of hope that it may zoom out to the end of that Class A bracket within the next two weeks.

This department offers its wholehearted hope that the Blue Devils will make the grade. Certainly they will get past Youngstown Wilson, their next foe on March 8 and then will face a little stiffer opposition in the winner of the bracket in which Youngstown Chaney is the "seeded" entry.

Mills has done a great job this season with his Blue Devils, who are largely those same lads who made up that splendid Lisbon football team. They remain now the best hope the county has in Class A tournament warfare, excluding East Liverpool, which plays in a different area tourney.

Lisbon's progress will be watched closely by all district fans.

Miller Is Given PAC Endorsement

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, March 1—Ray T. Miller, former Cleveland mayor and one-time Cuyahoga county Democratic chairman, has the backing of the CIO's Political Action committee in his campaign to become governor of Ohio.

Miller was voted a "complete and wholehearted" endorsement yesterday by the PAC's state central committee.

His opponent for the Democratic nomination—Ex. Gov. Frank J. Lausche—and Gov. Thomas J. Herbert, a Republican, will be opposed by the PAC. Delegates attacked the records of both.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson; Harry V. Armstrong, candidate for state treasurer, and Stephen M.

Young, candidate for congressman-at-large, also received formal endorsements. All are Democrats.

"Favorable ratings," but no endorsements, were given Joseph W. Harding and James H. Sullivan, Democratic candidates for secretary of state, and attorney general hopefuls Frazier Reams, Reed Winegardner and Herbert S. Duffy. No lieutenant governor candidate was endorsed, but two candidates for the Jan. 2 supreme court term—incumbent Robert M. Sohngen, a Democrat, and Guy B. Findley of Elyria, a Republican—received backing.

Easy on the eyes — and ears

STANDING still, it has the eager look of a pointer scenting game, so swift and flowing are its lines.

Sweeping by, it stands out unflinchingly from the highway crowd, unmistakably a Buick and unquestionably the year's trimmest fashion plate.

But have you traveled in one of these tidy new beauties?

Have you seen for yourself how smooth and silent is its flow of power, how hushed and quiet is its ride?

This comes from many things. From Fireball power now Hi-Poised for throbless smoothness. From a Vibra-Shielded ride that is your ever-present protection against road-noise, body-drum and vibration build-up.

And it comes, in addition, from a brand-new development we call Sound-Sorber top lining.

It's a thick pad of feathery insulation much like that you use in your own home, and it goes into every closed model in our 1948 SUPER and ROADMASTER series.

This new lining cloaks your Buick in new and delightful silence akin to that of your own living room—silence that encourages normal-tone conversation, makes soft radio music clear and enjoyable throughout the whole car.

So you ride in quiet as well as beauty when you travel in this style star.

You find it a great-hearted lovely that is soft of voice and gentle of manner—a delight to the traveling ear, the guiding hand and the passing eye.

Don't just see it at your Buick

dealer's — look into it with greatest care. The deeper you look the surer you'll be to see the wisdom of getting a firm order in now!

You shall have music—wherever you ride

Front seat or back, you listen to your radio at soft and undistorted volume in this new Buick. You talk without shouting, know freedom from rumble and din. Always cars of quiet comfort, the Buick SUPER and ROADMASTER step out still further with Sound-Sorber top lining — a Buick exclusive.

Kremlin Display of New Policies Displeases Hull

The Memoirs Of Cordell Hull

BY CORDELL HULL
Copyright, 1948, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

INSTALLMENT 31

AS AUTUMN, 1944, approached, my associates and I began to wonder whether Marshal Stalin and his government were commencing to move away from the policy of cooperation to which they had agreed at the Moscow conference and which, with a few exceptions, they had followed since then.

We were beginning to get indications that the Russians were about to drive hard bargains in their armistice agreements with Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania, which would give them something of the nature of control over those countries. At the same time, they had just been forced to take notice of Russia's strong attitude on the pending question in the Security Council.

Accordingly, I cabled Ambassador Harriman in Moscow on Sept. 18, mentioning the voting question that had arisen at the Dumbarton Oaks conference, I said that this, along with other recent developments, which would give them something of the nature of control over those countries. At the same time, they had just been forced to take notice of Russia's strong attitude on the pending question in the Security Council.

I added that I had begun to wonder whether Stalin and the Kremlin had determined to reverse their policy decided upon at Moscow and Tehran and to pursue a contrary course. I therefore asked Harriman's estimate of the present trend of Soviet policy so that we might decide how to meet this possible change in Russian attitude.

I stated to Harriman that I would find particularly helpful his views as to the causes that had brought about this change in Soviet policy toward the United States and a hardening of Russia's attitude toward Great Britain.

Harriman replied the following day giving a number of instances of Russia's unilateral actions or apparent unwillingness to collaborate with Britain and the United States. He said we had sufficient evidence to force that, if a world organization were established requiring agreement of all permanent members for the consideration of any dispute, regardless of whether or not one of them was involved, the Soviet government would ruthlessly block consideration by the Council of any question that it considered affected its interests. The Soviet government would also insist that the matter be settled by the Soviet Union with the other country or countries involved, particularly any disputes with her neighbors.

Russians Craved Peace

HARRIMAN stated his conviction that Stalin and his principal advisers placed the highest importance on the association of the Soviet Union in a major way with the three great Powers, but they expected that their political and military strength would enable them to dictate the conditions.

There was no doubt, he said, that the Russian people craved peace and had been led to believe that the intimate relationship developed with Britain and the United States during the war would continue after the war and guarantee a lasting peace.

The ambassador did not believe that Stalin could forego the material as well as the psychological value of this association without causing grave concern among the Russian people. Nevertheless, there were powerful elements close to Stalin who were unwilling to give up the right of independent action where Russia's interests were affected and to see Russia depend for her security solely on an untried world organization with associates whom these elements did not fully trust.

Stalin, he thought, liked to have two strings to his bow, and it did not appear inconsistent to the Marshall to pursue simultaneously these two methods to obtain security for his country and to promote its national interests as he envisaged them.

As I left office, the policy I advocated toward Russia rested on two bases. The first was: Continue in constant, friendly discussion with the Russians. Consult them at every point. Engage in no "cushion" matches with them. Explain to them, again and again if necessary, the principles upon which we felt peaceful international relations would prosper. Show them as clearly as possible the superior advantages to Russia of wholehearted co-operation with other nations as compared with the minor advantages of predominance in neighboring states. Make it clear to them that we did not object to a nation's preaching the merits of its form of government, whether Communism or Democracy, but that we did object to a nation's interfering in the internal affairs of other nations.

I hoped, if my health permitted me to remain in office, to persuade Russia to adopt the policy of co-operation and non-intervention that prevailed in the Western hemisphere, and to make this a solid world policy to which all nations subscribed. Under this Pan American policy transplanted to Europe, Russia could have the friendliest political relations and the liveliest economic exchanges with her neighbors while refraining from interfering in their internal affairs.

The second premise of our policy toward Russia was: By our own actions give Russia a concrete example of how we thought she should act. Therefore I opposed the view of our Joint Chiefs of Staff that the Pacific Islands we would take from Japan should become United States property.

I felt strongly that there should be no exception to my view that all the colonial territories wrested from the Axis should be placed under U. N. trusteeship system. It was not hard to see that Russia would not oppose our outright acquisition of these islands, but it was not hard to see also that Russia would thereupon use this acquisition as an example and precedent for similar acquisitions by herself. Our acquisition of these islands stopped its from objecting to similar acquisitions by other nations.

Prodded By Chapultepec Act

THEREFORE I likewise opposed the project later put through in the Act of Chapultepec at the Mexico City Conference in March, 1948, after my resignation, whereby the American Republics agreed in effect to intervene militarily in any of their number in certain circumstances. Once we had agreed to this new position on intervention, Russia had more excuse to intervene in neighboring states, and we had less reason to oppose her doing so.

President Roosevelt and I saw alike with regard to Russia. We both realized that the path of our relations would not be a carpet of flowers, but we also felt we could work with Russia. There was no difference of opinion between us that I can recall on the basic premise that we must and could get along with the Soviet Government.

The President did not confer with me regarding any phase of his Yalta Conference with Stalin and Churchill, nor did I know of the concessions made there to Russia until they were published. Yalta was the only international conference attended by Mr. Roosevelt when I was not in office. My views relating to the questions arising among the major nations were fully set forth in the State Department record of conferences and conversations. As I left office I was still opposed to any change in the vote to be given Russia, any more than the vote for our own country.

My view was that each major country possessed such major prestige and influence generally that it would have little difficulty in securing a full representation of its rights and interests at all times, without any need to have more than one vote.

On the occasions when the President came to see me at the hospital after my resignation, including his last visit only a few days before his death, he said nothing to me about any fears he might have that Russia would abandon our co-operative movement for peace or would block or destroy it. Since he and I had labored together since 1933 to bring about a better understanding with Russia, to say nothing of our joint efforts toward a peace organization, I am convinced he would have brought up the subject with me if he had reached the conclusion that Russia was pursuing a dangerous course.

It might be said that the President and I were taken in by Russia's promises and written pledges, that we should have realized it was impossible to do business with Soviet Russia, that we should have come to the conclusion that the democratic United States could not be friends with a government founded on Communism, and consequently that we should have adopted the policy of the mailed fist toward Russia right from the beginning.

Policy Justified

BUT AS WE WENT BACK OVER our relations with Moscow I felt, and President Roosevelt did too, that there was ample reason for the policy of friendship that we adopted. Since 1917 Russia had been wrestling with many nations that had refused to recognize her more or less on the basis of her policy of conducting subversive activities from Moscow. By constant effort, she had gradually increased the number of recognitions, being obliged in connection with virtually all acts of recognition to agree not to practice subversive activities against the countries establishing relations with her.

That she did not abandon these activities completely is a matter of record, but it was our view that organizing and building up and the other Governments, by steadily strengthening world opinion against such activities, would make as nearly certain as possible Russia's abandonment of this policy of interference in the affairs of other countries.

It is of record that the President and I had been at hammer and tongs with the Russian government many times during the years from the recognition in 1933 until we approached the Moscow Conference in 1947. I never lost an occasion to point out to the Russians the advantage to themselves of abandoning their thorny policy of intervention.

The President and I were convinced that it was eminently to the self-interest of Russia to be a full-fledged member of the United Nations security organization and such nations security organization with had to co-operate with the Russian leaders to secure the fact that the United Nations would ultimately evolve into unified, effective or-organization thoroughly adequate to maintain peace.

We recognized that there would be difficulties, that some of these would come from Russia, and that the United Nations would have to pass through uncertain, delicate periods; but we were certain by the end of 1944 that we and the nations working with us had laid the basis for a projected organization within which Russia and we could work together.

In our relations with Russia the President and I also had constantly before us the emphatic advice of our military leaders, given on several occasions, that friendship with Russia after the war was vitally essential from their military point of view.

FURNACE FUMES STOPPED, ALLIANCE VETERANS IN HOMES BREATHE AGAIN

ALLIANCE, March 1—Five veterans' families literally began to breathe easier today as workmen began replacing furnaces which had been giving off gas fumes this winter in all but two of the seven prefabricated homes purchased by Stark County commissioners here last spring. The furnace trouble first showed up early in the winter when two children were overcome by fumes. Later a mother in one of the homes was made extremely ill by the gas, and almost all of the residents of the five houses complained of recurring headaches.

The houses had been assembled by a local contractor as part of the county veterans' housing program last spring. The houses, which were approved by the Federal Housing Authority, were purchased as a unit, including plumbing, heating and electrical equipment, from a Chicago manufacturer.

As soon as complaints came to the attention of city officials, Fire Chief Milo Sights investigated and found definite traces of carbon monoxide gas in the homes. He asked the county commissioners to take action, and they notified the contractor.

The contractor immediately tried to remedy the situation by changing the vent openings as suggested by the manufacturer of the houses.

When this failed to stop the fumes, an expert was called in to see why the furnaces were not operating properly. He discovered they were designed for operation on 800-B. T. U. mixed gas of the type used in Chicago and could not properly burn the 1,000-B. T. U. natural gas of Alliance.

The fire chief then officially condemned the furnaces, as suggested by the contractor, to eliminate what he called a "death trap."

Workmen began replacing the furnaces today with units designed for use of the natural gas available in Alliance.

Two of the seven houses were not affected because they had been equipped with coal furnaces originally and these had been replaced with natural gas furnaces at the time the home were erected.

Miller Is Given PAC Endorsement

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, March 1—Ray T. Miller, former Cleveland mayor and one-time Cuyahoga county Democratic chairman, has the backing of the CIO's Political Action committee in his campaign to become governor of Ohio.

Miller was voted a "complete and wholehearted" endorsement yesterday by the PAC's state central committee.

His opponent for the Democratic nomination—Ex. Gov. Frank J. Lausche—and Gov. Thomas J. Herbert, a Republican, will be opposed by the PAC. Delegates attacked the records of both.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson; Harry V. Armstrong, candidate for state treasurer, and Stephen M.

Young, candidate for congressman-at-large, also received formal endorsements. All are Democrats.

"Favorable ratings," but no endorsements, were given Joseph W. Harding and James H. Sullivan, Democratic candidates for secretary of state, and attorney general hopefuls Frazier Reams, Reed Winegardner and Herbert S. Duffy. No lieutenant governor candidate was endorsed, but two candidates for the Jan. 2 supreme court term—incumbent Robert M. Sohngen, a Democrat, and Guy B. Findley of Elyria, a Republican—received backing.

STANDING still, it has the eager look of a pointer scenting game, so swift and flowing are its lines.

Sweeping by, it stands out unfailingly from the highway crowd, unmistakably a Buick and unquestionably the year's trimmest fashion plate.

But have you traveled in one of these tidy new beauties?

Have you seen for yourself how smooth and silent is its flow of power, how hushed and quiet is its ride?

This comes from many things. From Fireball power now Hi-Poised for throbless smoothness. From a Vibra-Shielded ride that is your ever-present protection against road-noise, body-drum and vibration build-up.

And it comes, in addition, from a brand-new development we call Sound-Sorber top lining.

It's a thick pad of feathery insulation much like that you use in your own home, and it goes into every closed model in our 1948 SUPER and ROADMASTER series.

This new lining cloaks your Buick in new and delightful silence akin to that of your own living room—silence that encourages normal-tone conversation, makes soft radio music clear and enjoyable throughout the whole car.

So you ride in quiet as well as beauty when you travel in this style star.

You find it a great-hearted lovely that is soft of voice and gentle of manner—a delight to the traveling ear, the guiding hand and the passing eye.

Don't just see it at your Buick

dealer's—look into it with greatest care. The deeper you look the surer you'll be to see the wisdom of getting a firm order in now!

You shall have music—wherever you ride

Front seat or back, you listen to your radio at soft and undistorted volume in this new Buick. You talk without shouting, know freedom from rumble and din. Always cars of quiet comfort, the Buick SUPER and ROADMASTER step out still further with Sound-Sorber top lining—a Buick exclusive.

Kremlin Display of New Policies Displeases Hull

The Memoirs Of Cordell Hull

BY CORDELL HULL
Copyright, 1948, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.
INSTALLMENT 31

AS AUTUMN, 1944, approached, my associates and I began to wonder whether Marshal Stalin and his government were commencing to move away from the policy of cooperation to which they had agreed at the Moscow conference and which, with a few exceptions, they had followed since then.

We were beginning to get indications that the Russians were about to drive hard bargains in their armistice agreements with Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania, which would give them something in the nature of control over those countries. At the same time we had just been forced to take notice of Russia's strong attitude on the pending question in the Security Council.

Accordingly I cabled Ambassador Harriman in Moscow on Sept. 18, mentioning the voting question that had arisen at the Dumbarton Oaks conference. I said that this, along with other recent developments, had caused serious doubts with regard to Russia's strong attitude on the pending question in the Security Council.

I added that I had begun to wonder whether Stalin and the Kremlin had determined to reverse their policy decided upon at Moscow and Tehran. I therefore asked Harriman's estimate of the present trend of Soviet policy so that we might decide how to meet this possible change in Russian attitude.

I stated to Harriman that I would find particularly helpful his views as to the causes that had brought about this change in Soviet policy toward the United States and a hardening of Russia's attitude toward Great Britain.

Harriman replied the following day giving a number of instances of Russia's unilateral actions or apparent unwillingness to collaborate with Britain and the United States. He said we had sufficient evidence to force that, if a world organization were established requiring agreement of all permanent members for the consideration of any dispute, regardless of whether or not one of them was involved, the Soviet government would ruthlessly block consideration by the Council of any question that it considered affected its interests. The Soviet government would also insist that the matter be settled by the Soviet Union with the other country or countries involved, particularly any disputes with her neighbors.

Russians Craved Peace
HARRIMAN stated his conviction that Stalin and his principal advisers placed the highest importance on the association of the Soviet Union in a major way with the three great Powers, but they expected that their political and military strength would enable them to dictate the conditions.

There was no doubt, he said, that the Russian people craved peace and had been led to believe that the intimate relationship developed with Britain and the United States during the war would continue after the war and guarantee a lasting peace.

The ambassador did not believe that Stalin could forego the material as well as the psychological value of this association without causing grave concern among the Russian people. Nevertheless, there were powerful elements close to Stalin who were unwilling to give up the right of independent action where Russia's interests were affected and to see Russia depend for her security solely on an untried world organization with associates whom these elements did not fully trust.

Stalin, he thought, liked to have two strings to his bow, and it did not appear inconsistent to the Marshall to pursue simultaneously these two methods to obtain security for his country and to promote its national interests as he envisaged them.

As I left office, the policy I advocated toward Russia rested on two bases. The first was: Continue in constant, friendly discussion with the Russians. Consult them at every point. Engage in no "cushin" matches" with them. Explain to them, again and again if necessary, the principles upon which we felt peaceful international relations would prosper. Show them as clearly as possible the superior advantages to Russia of wholehearted co-operation with other nations as compared with the minor advantages of predominance in neighboring states. Make it clear to them that we did not object to a nation's preaching the merits of its form of government, whether Communism or Democracy, but that we did object to a nation's interfering in the internal affairs of other nations.

I hoped, if my health permitted me to remain in office, to persuade Russia to adopt the policy of co-operation and non-intervention that prevailed in the Western hemisphere, and to make this a solid world policy to which all nations subscribed. Under this Pan American policy transplanted to Europe, Russia could have the friendliest political relations and the liveliest economic exchanges with her neighbors while refraining from interfering in their internal affairs.

The second premise of our policy toward Russia was: By our own actions give Russia a concrete example of how we thought she should act. Therefore I opposed the view of our Joint Chiefs of Staff that the Pacific islands we would take from Japan should become United States property.

I felt strongly that there should be no exception to my view that all the colonial territories placed under U. N. trusteeship system. It was not hard to see that Russia would not oppose our outright acquisition of these islands, but it was not hard to see also that Russia would thereupon use this acquisition as an example and precedent for similar acquisitions by herself. Our acquisition of these islands stopped us from objecting to similar acquisitions by other nations.

Prodded By Chapultepec Act
THEREFORE I likewise opposed the project later put through in the Act of Chapultepec at the Mexico City Conference in March, 1945, after my resignation, whereby the American Republics agreed in effect to intervene militarily in any of their number in certain circumstances. Once we had agreed to this new position on intervention, Russia had more excuse to intervene in neighboring states, and we had less reason to oppose her doing so.

President Roosevelt and I saw alike with regard to Russia. We both realized that the path of our relations would not be a carpet of flowers, but we also felt we could work with Russia. There was no difference of opinion between us that I can recall on the basic premise that we must and could go along with the Soviet Government.

The President did not confer with me regarding any phase of his Yalta Conference with Stalin and Churchill, nor did I know of the concessions made there to Russia until they were published. Yalta was the last international conference attended by Mr. Roosevelt when I was not in office. My views relating to the questions arising among the major nations were fully set forth in the State Department record of conferences and conversations. As I left office I was still opposed to any change in the vote to be given Russia, any more than the vote for our own country.

My view was that each major country possessed such powerful prestige and influence generally that it would have little difficulty in securing a full representation of its rights and interests at all times, without any need to have more than one vote.

On the occasions when the President came to see me at the hospital after my resignation, including his last visit only a few days before his death, he said nothing to me about any fears he might have that Russia would abandon our co-operative movement for peace or would block or destroy it. Since he and I had labored together since 1933 to bring about a better understanding with Russia, to say nothing of our joint efforts toward a peace organization, I am convinced he would have brought up the subject with me if he had reached the conclusion that Russia was pursuing a dangerous course.

It might be said that the President and I were taken in by Russia's promises and written pledges, that we should have realized it was impossible to do business with Soviet Russia, that we should have come to the conclusion that the democratic United States could not be friends with a government founded on Communism, and consequently that we should have adopted the policy of the mailed fist toward Russia right from the beginning.

Policy Justified
BUT AS WE went back over our relations with Moscow I felt, and President Roosevelt did too, that there was ample reason for the policy of friendship that we adopted. Since 1917 Russia had been wrestling with many nations that had refused to recognize her more or less on account of her policy of conducting subversive activities from Moscow. By constant effort, she had gradually increased the number of recognitions, being obliged in connection with virtually all acts of recognition to agree not to practice subversive activities against the countries establishing relations with her.

That she did not abandon these activities completely is a matter of record, but it was our view that organizing and building up and the other Governments by steadily strengthening world opinion against such activities, would make as nearly certain as possible Russia's abandonment of this policy of interference in the affairs of other countries.

It is of record that the President and I had been at hammer and tongs with the Russian government many times during the years from the recognition in 1933 until we approached the Moscow Conference in 1943. I never lost an occasion to point out to the Russians the advantages to themselves of abandoning their thorny policy of intervention.

The President and I were convinced that it was essential to the self-interest of Russia to be a full-fledged member of the United Nations security organization and to co-operate wholeheartedly with it, and that the Russian leaders would recognize this fact. We had hoped, of course, that the United Nations would eliminate the need for a world security organization.

Far East-Bound

George F. Kennan, above, Secretary of State Marshall's No. 1 planning officer in the State Department, has been ordered to the Far East in a move which apparently forecasts increased emphasis on such problems as drafting a peace treaty, Japan's reconstruction, Korea's future and aid to China.

organization thoroughly adequate to maintain peace.

We recognized that there would be difficulties, that some of these would come from Russia, and that the United Nations would have to pass through uncertain, delicate periods; but we were certain by the end of 1944 that we and the nations working with us had laid the basis for a projected organization within which Russia and we could work together.

In our relations with Russia the President and I also had constantly before us the emphatic advice of our military leaders, given on several occasions, that friendship with Russia after the war was vitally essential from their military point of view.

FURNACE FUMES STOPPED, ALLIANCE VETERANS IN HOMES BREATHE AGAIN

ALLIANCE, March 1—Five veterans' families literally began to breathe easier today as workmen began replacing furnaces which had been giving off gas fumes this winter in all but two of the seven prefabricated homes purchased by Stark County commissioners here last spring. The furnace trouble first showed up early in the winter when two children were overcome by fumes. Later a mother in one of the homes was made extremely ill by the gas, and almost all of the residents of the five houses complained of recurring headaches.

The houses had been assembled by a local contractor as part of the county veterans housing program last spring. The houses, which were approved by the Federal Housing Authority, were purchased as a unit, including plumbing, heating and electrical equipment, from a Chicago manufacturer.

As soon as complaints came to the attention of city officials, Fire Chief Milo Sights investigated and found definite traces of carbon monoxide gas in the homes. He asked the county commissioners to take action, and they notified the contractor.

The contractor immediately tried to remedy the situation by changing the vent openings as suggested by the manufacturer of the houses.

When this failed to stop the fumes, an expert was called in to see why the furnaces were not operating properly. He discovered they were designed for operation on 800-B. T. U. mixed gas of the type used in Chicago and could not properly burn the 1,000-B. T. U. natural gas of Alliance.

The fire chief then officially condemned the furnaces, as suggested by the contractor, to eliminate what he called a "death trap."

Workmen began replacing the furnaces today with units designed for use of the natural gas available in Alliance.

Two of the seven houses were not affected because they had been

'Birth-Control Housing' Aids Divorce, Claim

CINCINNATI, March 1 — "Birth-control housing" is responsible to considerable extent for the nation's booming divorce rate, Mrs. Samuel J. Roseman, chairman of the board of the national housing committee, says.

"The modern tendency to reduce the number of rooms in the home and to reduce the home size generally is considered by housing expert as 'birth-control housing,'" Mrs. Roseman said shortly after her arrival from New York.

"If homes were larger and adequate space for privacy was available families would rear more children and the whole aspect of family congeniality would be improved," she said.

Mrs. Roseman said she favors adoption of wartime measures to stimulate the flow of basic materials needed in the campaign to provide housing to meet new demands and to replace obsolete homes.

Be on Alert At All Times For Repair Jobs

IN ORDER to keep a home in good shape, it is imperative to be alert. At the first sight of a break of any kind, the owner should take measures to repair it. If he does not, he will eventually be confronted with a real repair job or a large bill. All of us know a vacant deteriorates with astonishing rapidity, and it is simply because the first broken window-pane or the first leak in the roof is not repaired.

Open seams in wallpaper, a loose floor-board or a spot on the ceiling, are plain warnings. They can develop into just as serious a condition as is indicated by one loose brick in a set of steps, but intelligent and prompt attention will confine them to the unimportant affairs which they are at the beginning.

Lack Of Mortgage Money Held Realty Price Block

Savings and loan associations and other mortgage lending institutions in Ohio again are in position to apply brakes to spiraling real estate prices, particularly on existing construction, according to Don L. Tobin, executive secretary of the Ohio Savings and Loan League Columbus. Tobin pointed out the demand for capital for all purposes is now enormous and far outstripping saving capacity. Real estate will have to compete in that situation, and it will find capital relatively less abundant, increasingly more expensive, and less eager to support and advancing price level, he said.

"Savings and loan associations in Ohio have reduced their liquidity from 44 percent of total assets to approximately 24 percent. Money available for mortgage financing also is not as plentiful in other financial institutions, which are limited by law as to the extent of the volume of mortgage loans made."

Tobin said this situation had arisen not because of a lack of new money, as deposits continue to pour into savings and loan associations in a volume equal to the banner year of 1947, but the demand for funds had stepped up and would continue to step up through 1948.

"The shortage of credit," Tobin said, "of course is a purely relative one. There will still be tremendous over-all amounts loaned for real estate construction and purchase, but they will not be large enough to support the type of rises in real estate prices which were existent in 1947. Credit facilities are not present to continue the rise, even though every other factor might be present to push up prices. On the other hand, incomes and wages in Ohio continue high, and that is enough to keep a commodity as much in demand as homes from falling very much."

Tobin said savings and loan associations in Ohio most probably would meet all legitimate demands for home financing, but would look for greater equities on the part of the buyer or builder.

Washing Dishes the Modern Way—Electrically!

MODERN DISHWASHING is just as simple as this! Press a control and— presto! Dishes, glasses, silverware, pots and pans are automatically washed and rinsed hygienically clean in water too hot for human hands. And that's not all, for after the final scalding rinse, the cover lifts automatically allowing the dishes to dry themselves in their own heat. All of this without your having to wet the tips of your fingers!

More than one month of every year is spent washing dishes by hand in the average family—and a thankless task it is! Yet all of this drudgery can be eliminated, all of this time can be saved. For, from the moment a G-E Dishwasher is installed in your kitchen, your hands will be kept out of dirty dishwater for good. A G-E Dishwasher will take over the whole job and do it automatically.

Hindman.

Landlord Writes All Supreme Court Justices

CLEVELAND, March 1—The Cleveland landlord who brought about the Supreme court test of the 1947 rent act revealed today that he has written all Supreme court justices since they upheld the law, charging that the "affirmed public taking of my property in peace time for political reasons."

The landlord, Cloyd W. Miller, said his real estate company already had suffered "approximately $12,000 property loss during six years of rent control."

Miller brought on the Supreme court test of the law when he notified tenants he was raising their rents because he held the rent act unconstitutional.

His letter added that "it is apparent that the Supreme court has abandoned its function to preserve the rights of individuals."

CONTRACTS SET JANUARY RECORD

Last month set a new record for January in dollar volume of construction contracts awarded in 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains, the P. W. Dodge Corp. reports. Awards totaled $615,206,000, a gain of 8 per cent over January, 1947, and 2 per cent less than December, 1947.

Ten of 15 Dodge reporting regions showed gains over January a year ago, with increase of more than 50 per cent reported for up-state New York, western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, southern Michigan, Minnesota, and North and South Dakota. Declines from last January ranging from 17 to 36 per cent were reported for New England, metropolitan New York, northern New Jersey, southwestern Ohio, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

Firm At Steubenville Making Steel Prefabs

STEUBENVILLE, March 1—The first prefabricated structure to roll off the assembly lines of the Celco Steel building division of the Ohio Valley Steel Sales Co. was on display at Steubenville today.

Company officials said that approximately 100 building units are being turned out each month. They expect production to reach the 500-a-month mark when the firm's new steel fabricating plant goes into operation at Irondale about March 1.

The prefabricated structures are manufactured from steel and insulation board, and are designed for housing purposes or general utility use.

HOME OF THE MONTH

Unusual in design, this ranch type home combines the kind of special built-ins every home owner dreams of with utmost convenience for gracious, modern living. A separate entrance for the bedroom wing keeps extra traffic off the living area which has its own front entrance and rear exit to the wide terrace. The garage and utility wing offers the same facility of traffic with individual outdoor entrance to laundry and openings to garage from outdoors, laundry and kitchen. The rear porch offers an ideal outdoor dining spot with a direct doorway to the compact kitchen and snack nook.

All bedrooms have exceptional closet and storage space with built-in dressers forming part of the storage wall. The living room also has a storage wall of built-in cabinets and through-counter to the kitchen for step saving in serving. A bank of picture windows forms the rear wall of this living area, opening with utmost privacy upon the sheltered terrace. There is ample room in the laundry for setting up hobby or recreational activities, and a handy lavatory that can keep a noisy party entirely isolated from the sleeping wing of the house.

This home was designed for PRACTICAL BUILDER Magazine, Chicago 3, by Arthur C. Austin of Zephyrhills, Fla. WORKING PLANS ARE NOT AVAILABLE.

FLEXIBLE PLASTIC WALL COVERING that can be bent around corners and cut with scissors, is ideal for permanent installations, come in 17 colors, reports Practical Builder, Chicago 3. ## CREDIT SQUEEZE HITTING HOUSING

Government Assistance Is Held Vital To Low-Cost Homes

Because banks will not make large loans to builders, Architectural Forum magazine urges the government extend FHA insurance to cover production loans by private lenders to large scale house builders. Such advance financing would enable house builders to purchase materials in volume and to install the site-prefabrication machinery that makes low cost housing possible.

The alternative to such insurance on production loans to house builders is forced cut-backs in the construction and home equipment industries that could precipitate a major shutdown in the whole giant structure of modern production. Architectural Forum said in its current issue.

Efficient organization of a house building job for site-prefabrication requires a heavy investment well in advance of construction. In addition to the cost of utilities, streets, sidewalks, and grading, the large scale house builder must have the resources for setting up a complete factory on his building site.

Operations on this scale demand all materials be contracted for and delivered well before foundation start. One operative house builder figures the minimum amount of cash required to organize a 1,000 house job is $1,600,000, not counting the cost of land.

Tight credits in housing finance will force most builders to abandon plans for large-scale low-cost housing, and inflate new housing and apartment costs beyond what the consumer can afford to pay.

In order to provide the builder with funds that make low cost housing possible, Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R) of Vermont will introduce a bill in Congress which would not only extend the essential Title VI, but amend FHA insurance regulations to cover construction loans to large scale builders. Such insurance is already available for prefabricators.

FHA Housing Progress Reported

Continued progress toward relief of the housing shortage in America by private builders and lending institutions, with the aid of the Federal Housing Administration, is indicated by a record volume of mortgage insurance applications covering new construction received last month by local FHA insuring offices.

New construction applications in January represented 79,028 dwelling units, a new monthly record exceeding the previous record established last November by nearly 14,000 units.

A considerable volume of this new residential construction is being built for rent. Whether for rent or sale, preference will be given to families of World War II veterans. Most of these new dwelling units are to be built and financed under the veterans emergency housing provisions of the National Housing Act. More than 3,500 will be provided under the permanent program of Title II.

47 BUILDING RATE PER HOUR SHOWN

Four hundred and one new houses were completed every working hour during 1947, the National Association of Home Builders reports.

Private home builders completed six-and-a-half new homes every minute on a 40-hour-week basis last year.

In the 12 months of 1947, 855,000 new houses were started and 834,500 were completed. On the basis of four persons to the average family, this means some 3,238,000 Americans got new homes last year.

Edward R. Carr, president of N.A.H.B., said he hit a million-homes-per-year rate — something never done before in history. The average FHA mortgage was $6,941. The average veteran's home cost $7,300.

The outlook for continued record production of new homes is bright unless financing and other factors upset the appreciable.

SAWMILL SURVEY IN DISTRICT PLANNED

Lumber shortages which have existed since the latter part of the war make the results of the annual sawmill survey of the U. S. Bureau of the Census of prime importance, according to District Supervisor John J. Gillespie with offices at 329 Postoffice building, Youngstown. Census enumerators under Supervision Gillespie's direction have started canvassing sawmills in this area to gather reports of the current sawmill survey which this year is being taken as part of the 1947 Census of Manufactures.

The major part of the manufacturing census will be carried out by mail but all sawmills will be visited by Census Bureau field people since it is almost impossible to build up accurate mailing lists for this industry by reason of its mobility and the out-of-the-way locations of many sawmills.

Figures developed from the sawmill survey will include data on lumber production, value of shipments, number of sawmills, employment, wages, cost of materials, and related items. The lumber production information by species will be available by counties, making it especially useful for analyzing local conditions.

Reporting in the Census of Manufactures is mandatory.

For Farm Homes

More daylight for the farm home through the use of picture windows is the trend among residents who are planning to replace old-type windows during remodeling or for their new farm home.

Housing Snag In Immigration Plan

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1 —With the worst of the housing shortage over, the existing housing supply in the United States is entirely adequate to absorb America's "fair share" of the displaced persons of Europe admitted under emergency legislation now pending in Congress.

This is the conclusion of Miles L. Colean, housing consultant and former deputy administrator of the Federal Housing Authority in a comprehensive report issued today. Mr. Colean, author of "American Housing," based his survey on government statistics from the Census Bureau and the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"The displaced persons could be accommodated without difficulty in the existing housing supply at or below the 1940 occupancy per dwelling unit since there is less intensive housing space than existed in 1940," the report declares. "The standard of occupancy in 1940 was generally adequate."

Says Worst Shortage Over

The survey report points out:

1. The worst of the housing shortage is over;
2. The rate of residential construction is beginning to improve;
3. Since the majority of displaced persons could not possibly be admitted before 1949, and subsequent years, the effect of their admission to this country, if any, will be felt in a diminishing degree.

Life Insurance Firms Invest In Real Estate

Marking the first major development of a new type of financing for American business and industry, the life insurance companies of this country last year purchased $123,000,000 worth of nonhousing real estate for investment purposes, bringing holdings of this type to $192,000,000 at year end, the Institute of Life Insurance reports.

Gov. William Tuck of Virginia is shown asking the General Assembly at Richmond to remove the names of candidates for president and vice president from the ballot and hand the state's presidential voting power to a party convention—a move aimed at keeping Virginia's 11 electoral votes from President Truman in relation for his civil rights initiative program.

Price War—And In 1948!

Butter prices come tumbling down in Butte, Mont., as local grocers engage in a price war along pre-1939 lines. Here unbelieving customers stare at the sign in the Copper City's largest independent grocery advertising butter at 49 cents a pound with every $5 order of groceries and for 25 cents with any $15 order. ### Alvis Takes Over Pen Job

New Acting Warden of Ohio penitentiary in Columbus, Ralph W. Alvis (right) chats with Ohio State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood before taking over duties vacated by Frank D. Henderson, who resigned allegedly "under fire" by the Herbert administration. (International Soundphoto)

This Is Better Than Germany

It's many a moon since these immigrants from German Displaced Persons camps enjoyed such a meal. They're some of the 400 DPs who recently arrived at St. Paul Perimeter, near Montreal, to take up new and happier lives in Canada. With the help of the government, they are guaranteed homes and a year's employment at prevailing wages.

Collegiate Goats Live in Artistic Barn

The 40-foot mural on this barn was painted by students at Marietta (Ohio) College from a medieval design by artist Franc Epping, of Lenox, Mass. It shows the Archangel Gabriel ousting Satan, represented by a dragon, from heaven. The barn houses a herd of 20 goats on the farm near Lower Salem, Ohio, owned by Swiss-born Prof. Fritz Marti, who teaches philosophy and medieval art at Marietta. In photo, his daughter, Judith, 13, holds one of the goats while calling in the herd.

Trouble-Shooter

EX-MARINE Vernon McAninch of Waco, Tex., has arrived in Palestine as the U. S. State department trouble-shooter. Flying to Jerusalem from Rome, where he has served with the U. S. embassy since 1945, McAninch will arrange for protection for the American consulate in the troubled Holy Land. (International)

Soviet Asks Pact

While the world wonders where the Hammer and Sickle will strike next, Finland's President Juho K. Paasikivi and his cabinet are reported considering a new Russian proposal for a full military alliance. Only Finnish Communists favor a full military alliance rather than a pact aimed at possible future German aggression.

Best of Breed

DISPUTED AREAS IN ANTARCTIC

DEFYING BRITISH PROTESTS, President Gabriel Gonzalez Videla of Chile, has established a second military base on Palmer Peninsula (1 on map), near the Antarctic Circle. Upon reaching Greenwich Island (2), President Videla laid claim to it on behalf of his country, which has a weather station there. Since this island lies in the South Shetland group (A, inset), which Britain considers to be hers, the controversy may reach the U. N. Security Council. Photo at top shows a British surveying party on Wiencke, in the Falklands. Thirty-five miles to the southwest is Deception Island (3), now claimed by Argentina. A British warship was reported heading for the southern Polar area. (International)

Vet Testimony Hits Pension Policy

It's sometimes easier for regular Army officers and top ranking generals to get lifetime disability pensions even though they can hold jobs than for non-regulars who have been wounded. Testimony by two combat veterans before the House Armed Services Subcommittee indicates. First Lt. Thomas L. Frasier, 32, Adrian, Ga., flyer whose neck was broken in a bomber crash, said he had been discharged and recalled for treatment, but could not get a pension. Capt. Carlos Ogden, 31, San Jose, Calif., wears the Congressional Medal of Honor, was wounded three times, discharged with his arm in a cast and hearing impaired, but could get only 50 per cent disability although he, like Frasier, had to go to Walter Reed Hospital for treatment after discharge.

This Way Out

QUITE unconcerned is 2-year-old Douglas Miller, of Dayton, O., as he is shown a screw he swallowed a year ago which had just been removed from his left lung. Nurse Flossie Horton of Children's Hospital, Chicago, is holding both child and evidence. (International)

Showgirl of Year

$1,236,000 Smile

FORMER automobile dealer Fred Emich, 49, and his wife beam with joy after a Federal Court in Chicago awarded him triple damages of $1,236,000 against the General Motors Corp. Emich had sued under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, charging his dealer franchise was taken away for refusing to use the GM sales financing plan. (International)

WASHINGTONVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Murphy of Greentown, and Mrs. Annie Benner and son, John, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Kornbau.

The 10 social held at Perry grange Saturday night was a success. The proceeds go to a scholarship fund for Minnie Price. The Thimble Fingers 4-H club was entertained by the president, Francis Gloor, Thursday evening. Gifts were laid for 13 at a beautiful appointed table decorated with Valentine's names entertained with prize awarded. Her aunt, Mrs. Helen Gloor, and Mrs. Kate Koeber assisted her in setting.
